Captain Pembroke
and Mr. Effingham

By JULIUS M'BRIE

Captain George Pembroke of the royal engineers, when there were British troops stationed in Canada, wrote his fiancée that he was ordered home to England. The lady, Emily Collins, who was a New Yorker, was somewhat surprised at a request made in the letter that she should sail from that city, meet him in London and marry him there. Miss Collins would have considered this an impertinence, but, reading further, saw that the order was imperative that the officer report at once, and, since a steamer sailed from Montreal the evening he received it, he would sail with her.

Now, this was all a tissue of deception. Pembroke, ten years before a young lieutenant, had met Miss Collins, a girl of seventeen, in England; had flirted with her, but the two had drifted apart. After he came to Canada he opened a correspondence with her that led to an engagement. Instead of sailing from Montreal he purposed going across from New York and in the same steamer as his fiancée. Having grown ten years older and raised a full beard, he did not believe she would recognize him. He would endeavor to win her under another name, then confess that he was Pembroke himself.

This was a pretty scheme—that is, if he succeeded in winning the girl away from himself.

When the ship sailed in which Miss Collins was to go to England, Captain Pembroke in mufti, under the name of Guy Effingham, was on board. He was a handsome fellow, of an aristocratic bearing and quite a lady killer. He did not recognize Miss Collins, who had considerably changed, but succeeded in securing some one to point her out to him. An introduction was secured, and the captain and his fiancée were soon sitting next each other on deck in steamer chairs engaged in a desperate flirtation.

The word flirtation is generally used in connection with women, and we do not associate it with persons on the lee side of middle age. But both Pembroke and Miss Collins were flirts.

The night before reaching port while steaming up the channel the captain gave Miss Collins a fictitious account of himself, stating that he was related to a duke; that he had an income of $8,000 a year and was going home to stand for parliament.

Having thus prepared the way, he told her that the moment he saw her on the day they sailed he knew that she was destined to have a marked effect upon his subsequent life and he had since realized that he was madly in love with her. Then he offered her his heart and hand. She hid her face on his bosom and whispered "Yes."

Pembroke was shocked. It was not that he had won the lady from himself, but that she should show so little sense of honor in thus deserting one man for another. He expected that she would say something about complications with another lover, but she maintained silence on the subject, and he could see no evidence of the slightest qualm of conscience at her dishonorable conduct.

Pembroke, of course, knew where he could find Miss Collins in London, but he asked for her address and when he received it put it carefully in his pocketbook. When they separated it was understood that he should call the evening of his arrival. The final parting took place on the upper deck behind a great wind funnel, where there was no one to see. So exuberant was the caress he received that he went away as delighted with his success as Guy Effingham as he was enraged at the treatment of George Pembroke.

"You'll not disappoint me tomorrow evening," she said, "will you?"

"Certainly not. Why do you doubt me?"

"You men are so uncertain. I have known you only ten days. It seems that my happiness is too intense to be real. I must be dreaming."

"I assure you mine surpasses it."

"Well, then, goodbye. I shall expect you early."

Miss Collins was to go to London with her people, while Pembroke went alone. On the way it seemed to him that he had been caught in a whirlwind that had turned him not only completely round, but upside down. What should he do? Accept the slight put upon him as Pembroke and give way to the ecstasy experienced by Effingham, or, as Pembroke, hurl back the love she had lavished on Effingham? He was not quite sure whether he was a flit or an accepted lover.

When he went to see her in London he had not made up his mind what course he would pursue. When she advanced to receive him his heart fluttered. Throwing her arms about him, she looked up into his face with a glad smile and said:

"Oh, George, dearest George, how happy I am to be with you again!"

"George?"

"Yes, George."

"You know?"

"Your personating another to win me again was just too lovely for anything."

"But—but how did you know?"

"Stupid. I recognized you long before you saw me at all."

"Well, well, what a donkey I have been! Do you know I've been half crazy as myself and in the seventh heaven as the other fellow."

"And just think. I have been loved by two different men at the same time. It was delicious."

Cadet Life at West Point.

Briefly, at 3:45 p. m. the academic work is over for the day and drills for all classes occupy the hour from 4 to 5, followed by a dress parade at 5:25, excepting Wednesdays and Saturdays. This is the schedule from Sept. 1 to Nov. 1 and from March 15 to June. On Saturdays academic work ends at 12:30, and, with the exception of inspection at 1:30, the afternoon of the cadet is free until 6:25 supper call. His amusements are much like those of college students generally. Football is perhaps the most popular organized sport. Games are played on the West Point grounds with teams from many colleges, and the season closes with the annual army-navy game, when the West Pointers meet the midshipmen from Annapolis on Franklin field, Philadelphia. Basketball follows during the winter months, many contests with teams from other schools occurring during the season, and then in the spring comes baseball of course—Popular Mechanics.

Woman and Her Hat.

A woman cannot stick a hat on her head as you stick a stamp on a letter. There is an ingenious machine that sticks stamps on letters at the rate of several thousands an hour. But nobody has invented a machine for sticking hats on the heads of women.

A man can buy a hat in five minutes, but no woman would dream of buying a hat in less than an hour. Often a woman will acquire a splitting headache in the attempt to find one hat to suit her out of a hundred, and not seldom she carries away the headache without a hat on it.

The hat hunt is only a small part of the daily agony of shopping, and yet a man would rather cut his throat than engage in a hat hunt as a dispassionate spectator. Men prefer to hunt the fox or the stag, the tiger or the lion, the grizzly or the grouse. A tiger hunt is not nearly so perilous as a hat hunt.—London Opinion.

Profits in Waste Paper.

The sale of waste paper used to afford perquisites for government officials. When John McCulloch of Dictionary of Commerce fame was appointed comptroller of the stationery office in 1841, he discovered that the proceeds from the sale of government waste paper were divided among his subordinates, who thus more than doubled their official incomes. The new comptroller prohibited this practice on the ground that all moneys derived from such sales belonged to the exchequer. Some of the officials disregarded this prohibition and continued to sell waste paper and pocket the proceeds. When this came to the ears of McCulloch they were prosecuted for "systematic appropriation of public property." For many years past the stationery office has made over £10,000 a year from the sale of waste paper.—London Mail.

Jenny Lind's California Debut.

At Monterey, Cal., formerly a part of Mexico and ceded to the United States during the Mexican war, is the first public building built in California and now a broken down, weather raked ruin of adobe. In this building Jenny Lind made her first California debut, and when the gold the enthusiastic miners had thrown upon the stage after her performance was gathered up it was found to fill two five-gallon oil cans—about twenty pounds of gold and equal in value to about $5,000. Another curious building is a police station which is built within the braces of an oil derrick and for unique buildings certainly establishes a record.—Health Magazine.

Wise Old Doctor.

Patient (abed and very sick)—But, doc, if physicians never agree on anything, what's the use of calling any two of them for this consultation you propose?

Old Family Doctor—I'll fix that all right. I'll just go out and get a couple of these young fellows running around in the same make of automobile. When you get 'em agreed on that they generally think alike in everything else. Take it from me, the three of us will find out what's the matter with you in about ten minutes.—St. Louis Republic.

Thoughtless Expression.

"You say in this story," commented the copy reader, "that the heroine buried her face in her hands."

"Well," asked the story writer, "isn't that all right?"

"No. You can't have an ideal heroine with such large hands as that."—Washington Star.

She Didn't Believe It.

"Disease," said the doctor, "always attacks the weakest spot."

"Oh," the patient's wife replied, "that can't be true. If it were, my husband would have brain fever or something like that instead of liver trouble."—Exchange.

Regained His Nerve.

Hubbard—Simpkins has got over his nervous prostration. Pease—How can you tell? Hubbard—Why, I met him on the street last night, and he wanted to borrow $20.—Luck.

What Puzzled Her.

"I understood the text all right," exclaimed Aunt Ann Peabody after the sermon was over. "But the preacher's explanation of it puzzled me a good deal."—Chicago Tribune.

"Is he the fellow, pa, who takes away the years from a woman's age?"—Boston Herald.

I. O. G. T. District Meeting

The regular quarterly session of the Merrimack Valley District lodge of Good Templars was held Labor Day in A. O. U. W. hall. About 100 were in attendance from Andover, Lawrence, Haverhill, Lowell, Newburyport, and many of the towns in the valley. District Chief William Boodle of Haverhill presided.

Both forenoon and afternoon sessions were held and considerable routine business was transacted. At the afternoon session thirteen candidates were initiated, the grand electoral superintendent of Salem being in charge of the ceremonies.

In the evening an entertainment was given to the delegates in Abbott Village. The program comprised musical numbers, fancy dancing, and recitations as follows: Selections by the junior choir of Pride of Andover juvenile lodge; duet, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Valentine; vocal solo, John Crook; mandolin selections, Miss Mary Black; Highland Fling and skipping rope dance, Miss Mary A. Low; duet, K. Auchterlonie and Miss Ina Jack; dance, Miss Mary Auchterlonie; harmonica and piano selections, K. Auchterlonie and Chas. Murphy.

It was voted to hold a union meeting in Andover Tuesday, October 14.

Agricultural School Instructor

The trustees of the Independent Agricultural School of the County of Essex announce the election of Wm. Bewsher to a position on the instruction staff of the new school.

Mr. Bewsher was born in England and received his early training and education in that country. He acquired his scientific training at Staveley School, Staveley, Westmoreland, England, and has continued his studies in this country. Mr. Bewsher has had a long and valuable experience on some of the finest and best managed estates in Massachusetts, and particularly along the North Shore in the capacity of foreman and superintendent.

In the new school he will specialize in instructing classes in vegetable gardening, greenhouse management, and in the theory of the nurseryman's craft. Much of the execution of the development of the ornamental side of the school grounds will come under his care.

It is expected that the most cordial relations will be established between the Agricultural School and owners and managers of large shore estates, and that classes will be given the privilege of visiting on their estates for observation study. Undoubtedly positions may be secured later for graduates, as men having both proper training and a good practical knowledge in this branch of agricultural work, are hard to obtain.

BODIES HURLED THROUGH AIR

Twenty-One Lives Lost In New Haven Road Wreck

FIFTY PERSONS ARE INJURED

Two Pullman Cars Literally Reduced to Mere Kindling Wood as White Mountain Express Plunges Into Second Section of Bar Harbor Express—Antiquated Cars and Equipment Figure in Latest Disaster in Connecticut, Which Occurs During Fog—Sombre Greeting to Elliott on First Working Day as President of the System

Twenty-one persons are dead and fifty injured in the most terrible of the long series of wrecks on the New Haven road.

Wooden cars, condemned signals and careless operation again plunged many souls into eternity when the first section of the White Mountain express, plunging through the fog at forty miles an hour, ripped through two sleeping cars of the second section of the Bar Harbor express at Miller's crossing, near North Haven.

The death list follows: William C. Altschul, Norfolk; Miss Margaret Armstrong, Washington; Miss Harriet Biddle, Torrance, Pa.; Miss Marie L. Bullitt, Philadelphia; Miss Emilie Kennedy Davis, Philadelphia; Samuel Crozer Fox, Philadelphia; Albert Green, New York; Royal A. Hotchkiss, New Haven; Philo Hotchkiss, his brother; Harry K. Izani, New York; George T. Koga, New York; Howard F. Martin, Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Mrs. H. F. Martin, Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Dr. James B. Marvin, Louisville, Ky.; Mrs. James B. Marvin, Louisville, Ky.; Martha H. Marvin, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin; Daniel Neal McQuillan, Overbrook, Philadelphia; Frank P. Rutter, Scranton, Pa.; Mrs. Frank P. Rutter, Scranton, Pa.; Robert P. Yahn, Philadelphia; Mary Jane Yahn, about 55 years of age.

A Terrible Scene

Frightful screams arose from the dying, pinned in the wreckage. Bodies were hurled more than 100 feet through the air by the force of the collision. Pushed on by the weight of seven heavy coaches, the locomotive of the White Mountain express crashed through the rear cars of the other train as though they were pasteboard and tilted the third sleeper until it fell upon its side.

Fog spread like a pall over Long Island sound and rolled inland for miles. Yet the White Mountain express tore on at forty miles an hour, until it was within 100 feet of the Bar Harbor train. New Haven officials say that at the speed the train was making it could not have been stopped within 1500 feet.

Engineer Miller of the White Mountain express and Rear brakeman Murray of the wrecked train were ordered held without bail by Coroner Mix late last night.

Third Wreck in a Year

It was the third serious wreck which the New Haven has suffered within a year, and inaugurated the first day of the regime of Howard Elliott, the newly elected head of the road. Elliott, returning from his summer home in New Hampshire to assume his duties, passed over the scene of the wreck on an earlier train, less than an hour before.

Both more than an hour late, the two trains passed Wallingford, three miles north of the scene of the accident, eight minutes apart. Eight minutes ahead of them was the first section of the Bar Harbor express, and a local train, due to stop at North Haven, three miles south of the wreck, led them all.

Under the rules of the road, according to the officials, an engineer may pass a "banjo" signal set at red after he has brought his train to a stop. This, according to the railroad officials, the engineer of the Bar Harbor express did, and then came to another stop about 100 feet on the other side of the signal, a mile north of North Haven.

Disaster on Straight Track

This opened the signal in the previous block, a mile away, and down a stretch of track, straight as an arrow, plunging through the thick fog, came the White Mountain express, with the impetus of seven cars, baggage, day-coach and five sleepers behind the engine. Meantime Flagman Murray of the Bar Harbor train had gone back with the torpedoes, a distance, it was said, of 400 feet. The torpedoes went off, according to the officials of the road and some of the train crew. Then came the crash.

According to Vice President Whaley of the New Haven, it would not have been possible at the speed the train was making for Miller to have stopped his train within 1500 feet after he saw the signal. The engineer did not see it, he says, until he was almost upon it, or scarcely more than 100 feet from the rear of the Bar Harbor express, and at the same moment heard the torpedoes. Had the semaphore system been in operation, Whaley said, Miller would have got a "caution signal" in the previous block, a mile away, and the wreck would have been avoided.

Passengers in both trains were asleep when the collision occurred. The White Mountain engine, No. 1337, twin of the new Pacific super-heated locomotive that figured in the Stamford wreck of last June, plowed through the two sleepers of the Bar Harbor as if they had been as much papier mache. In the forward cars of the Bar Harbor train, which consisted of eleven sleepers, there was panic among the passengers, but the White Mountain came to a stop so gradually, comparatively speaking, that many of its passengers scarcely realized that anything serious had happened.

For several minutes after the first shock there was silence, the passengers said, and then sounded the screams of the wounded. Passengers from both trains turned out to the work of rescue. They found most of the dead and injured strewn on both sides of the track; there were few in the wreckage.

The terrific force of the engine had literally reduced the two Pullmans to the mere kindling wood, and the bodies of the passengers, instead of being buried in the wreckage, fell upon it or were hurled entirely clear of it, over a fence into a watermelon patch. The vestibule of one Pullman, sitting beside the pilot of the locomotive, and the vestibule of the other, tossed into the ditch, were the only parts of the two cars not completely demolished. The wreckage was burned by the railroad company.

The revised list of dead stands at twenty-one and five of the seventeen injured in hospitals are likely to die. Many inquiries have come for persons supposedly missing, but the undertakers to whom bodies were distributed by the coroner have had a total of twenty-one, indicating that this is the entire death list.

Thirteen Persons Killed and Seven Fatally Hurt In England

Thirteen persons were killed, seven were fatally hurt and many others were injured in a rear-end collision between two express trains near Aisgillie, Eng.

Both trains were en route from Carlisle to London when one overtook the other. The accident was due to a mistaken signal in the fog. Several coaches in the forward train were telescoped and the wreckage caught fire.

There were frightful scenes while the mutilated passengers were being removed. Some of the bodies taken from the debris were almost completely incinerated.

MAKES PLEA FOR NATIONAL UNITY

Haldane's Speech Before American Bar Association

IS CONSIDERED EPOCH-MAKING

Deals With Relationships of Three Great Nations Whose Policies May Yet Be Governed by Public Opinion—Possible to Establish True Union Between Sovereign States

The address delivered by the lord high chancellor of England, Viscount Haldane of Cloan, formed the principal feature of the opening meeting of the American Bar association at Montreal.

Haldane had an audience which completely filled the Princess theatre, and which included many of the great legal lights of the western continent and several from Europe. His theme was "Higher Nationality—A Study in Law and Ethics."

VISCOUNT HALDANE

It was in many ways an epoch-making speech, dealing as it did with the relationships of three great nationalities.

Haldane told how British law in the early days was largely vested in the sovereign of the realm who had associated with him the lord high chancellor as the executive of the king's justice. That ancient law was based upon experience rather than logic, he said, and this fact had influenced the law and the constitutions of the three great nations, England, France and America.

The speaker argued that the great force that actuated mankind in observing the law was not fear of the officers of justice, but fear of public opinion, and that therefore, public opinion tended more than the arbitrary execution of justice to restrain men from law breaking.

Developing this argument, Haldane proceeded to suggest that the same policy might possibly be adopted by nations and that the time had come when nations might be as much ashamed to follow the ancient methods of settling differences and disputes as individuals had become in late years.

"Canada and Great Britain on the one hand and the United States on the other, with their common language, their common interests and their common ends, form something resembling a single society," said the lord chancellor. "If there be such a society it may develop within itself a foundation for international faith of a kind that is new in the history of the world."

"Without interfering with the freedom of action of these great countries," continued the lord chancellor, "or the independence of their constitutions, it may be possible to establish a true union between sovereign states."

"This union will doubtless, if it ever comes into complete being, have its witness in treaties and written agreements. But such documents can never in themselves constitute it. Its substance, if it is to be realized, must be sought for deeper down in an intimate social life."

The English visitor urged lawyers to assist in the freshening of the conventional atmosphere which surrounds men in public life by omitting no opportunity to think rightfully and to contribute to the fashioning of a more hopeful and resolute kind of public opinion.

GERMANS NOT IN IT

American Boat Ellen Winner in Second Sonder Race

The American sander Ellen won the second international sander boat race in a drifting match at Marblehead, Mass.

It was not a race so far as the Germans were concerned. They were never near enough to see the racing going on among the three American boats.

The scow shaped German, Wittelbach, supposed to be a light weather boat, never had a chance. This boat was even beaten out by its companions.

All the American yachts crossed the finish line ahead of their three German competitors in the first of the international sander races.

Judge J. D. Spellman, who was a passenger with Aviator George Schmidt when the latter's aeroplane plunged to earth at the Rutland, Vt., fair, killing the pilot, is practically assured of recovery.

Although Judge Spellman was caught in the machine just as Schmidt was, he escaped without a broken bone after the 400-foot drop, and burns he received when his clothing caught fire from the wrecked engine were his principal injuries.

Schmidt, who although only 23 years old, had been flying five years, had promised his mother that he would give up flying when the fair closed. His mother and father saw him plunge to death.

Panic in Comb Factory Fire

THAW IS RUSHED TO THE BORDER

To Be Thrust Across as an Undesirable Citizen

IS DECLARED A FREE MAN

Beginning of Eng of Refuge in Canada Comes With Dramatic Swift-ness—Action of Immigration Officials Expected to Speedily Land Fugitive Back in Matteswan Asylum

Harry K. Thaw, pried out of the Sherbrooke, Que., jail on a writ of habeas corpus obtained by William T. Jerome, enjoyed three minutes of liberty and was then seized by the dominion immigration authorities and hustled by automobile to Coaticook, on the border.

A special board of inquiry will at once sit on his case, and he may be soon thrust across the Vermont border as an undesirable alien. His lawyers have planned no procedure to resist extradition to New York, and the belief is current that before many hours Thaw will be back in Matteswan asylum for the criminal insane, from which he escaped on Aug. 17.

The beginning of the end of Thaw's refuge in Canada came with dramatic swiftness. A writ of habeas corpus, sued out at the direction of Jerome, with John Boudreau, chief of police of this village, as petitioner, was sustained by Matthew Hutchinson, superior judge of the district of St. Francis, sitting in chambers at Sherbrooke.

Stolid, pallid, numb, Thaw sat not five feet from the judge as he read. When, in the very last paragraph, the court declared him a free man, whether he desired liberty or not, Thaw seemed to crumple up on the lounge where he sat.

But he did not rise. W. W. McKeown of his counsel leaned over and, patting him on the shoulder, whispered. Thaw raised his big staring eyes and stood up. Immigration officers in the room, headed by E. B. Robertson, assistant superintendent, moved near him, and then Thaw began slowly to move to the door. At the threshold Robertson said simply: "Come with us, Mr. Thaw." And without a word except a hoarse goodbye to the reporters, Thaw obeyed.

Five minutes later a gray roadster streaked away from the courthouse. In the back seat was Thaw. He had not even been given time to pack his scanty belongings and voluminous correspondence in his cell. In an hour he was back in Coaticook, guarded in the immigration detention room by two stalwart dominion police. None but counsel was allowed to see him.

The twenty-two-mile trip was without special incident. Behind Thaw trailed his defeated lawyers. W. L. Shurtieff, the first to arrive, issued this statement:

"If they have doctors all ready to pronounce Thaw insane, as I am informed they have, there is almost no hope of preventing his immediate deportation. I believe if we could find a way to get the case into the courts we would have a good chance to prove this immigration act unconstitutional."

Dr. Kleb, superintendent of Matteswan, followed Mr. Jerome and will doubtless be called to testify as to Thaw's detention in an institution for the insane.

A quick verdict is expected. The New York authorities have arranged everything on the other side of the border, even down to distributing deputy sheriffs and automobiles. It would not surprise Thaw's lawyers, if he, once across the line, were put bodily into a car and headed straight for the New York line.

VOTE TO END STRIKE

Blower Works Employees Return to Work on Foss' Terms

The strike of the 1290 workers in the Sturtevant Blower Works at Hyde Park, Mass., is over as the result of a vote taken in a fiercely contested meeting of the strikers.

The men who comprise six-sevenths of the whole number out will present themselves at the plant to go to work according to the offer made by Governor Foss two weeks ago.

The 200 strikers at the Becker machine shop will not return to work. They fought out the matter and decided not to accept the terms of settlement offered by the company.

According to the offer made by Foss the strikers get no guaranteed concessions excepting his word that the better class of workmen will be paid more money.

"LOOPS THE LOOP"

Dare-Devil Performance by Birdman 3600 Feet in Air

Pegoud, the French aviator, performed the most remarkable feat in the history of aviation when, at a height of more than 3600 feet, he flew head downward, for a quarter of a mile in "looping the loop," or describing a gigantic letter S in midair.

Although spectators regarded the flight as a new attempt to create thrills, experts say the experiment is epoch-making in the attainment of safety in the air.

Pegoud recently caused a sensation by dropping safely from an aeroplane with a parachute.

"See Charlie Dugan"

Just a word to the Roosevelt Republicans who are supposed to be anxious to return to the Republican party under the leadership of that distinguished patriot who has been sent on from Washington to redeem the state. You must get very busy if you would come aboard while there is yet room, and probably the quickest way for you to return to the only haven provided in these troublous times is to "see Charlie Dugan." Write, telephone, telegraph, or better still, call at Gussie's headquarters and "see Charlie Dugan." You noble patriots, who, once upon a time saw fit to cross the purposes of Augustus Peabody, will undoubtedly recall that at that time he it was who advised you to go and "see Charlie Dugan," and when you saw Charlie you were told all kinds of awful things by this Charlie Dugan, who was said to know it all. Don't hesitate in this emergency; write, telephone, telegraph, or better still, call and "see Charlie Dugan."

N. B.—Charlie Dugan is now the official hand-shaker at the Gardner headquarters. We can hardly believe that Charlie will find time to greet all of those enthusiastic Roosevelt men whom once upon a time he was told to hang, and to rout horse, foot and dragon, but who now are to be welcomed back by the new savior of the new Republicanism in the new deal by the new? nay, nay! the same old Gussie. Hurry, all ye, and "see Charlie Dugan."

"Has Andover a High School?"

This was the query set forth in a news story in the Townsman last week, but it was not a new query at that. For many years there have been grave doubts as to whether or not Andover had a high school, and it has been contended ever since the endowment that the control of the institution was such as to give the town really very little management of the school. It is true that that control was somewhat increased by the construction of the present building at the expense of the town, and a gift of the building so far as its use was concerned, to the trustees of Pynchard. It is true that the conditions were still further complicated and the relation between the town and the trustees was made more intricate when by a lack of funds, it became necessary for the town to make an appropriation for certain teachers engaged in the school. But all along through the various stages of the Pynchard controversy the air has not been cleared at all, but rather has become more cloudy and the situation has developed into a more acute one. It is doubtful if this situation can be allowed to continue much longer and it is probable that the town will have to take the bull by the horns in a very short time and divide sharply the work to be done by the funds of the trustees at Pynchard and the actual control and management of a high school under the legal definition set forth by the attorney-general's department.

Pynchard graduates and friends of the school have had this thing in mind for a long time. They have held several discussions with regard to the problem. They are very desirous that some of the traditions of the school may still hold good and may be continued in any rearrangement of work. There is little that is new in recent decisions, and there is little in the present acute situation which involves an opportunity to give instruction to pupils of North Reading, that calls for much extended comment. Until, however, the town has taken up the problem and settled it, the same old things will become new every few years, and however precious traditions may be, and however enthusiastic alumni may become when discussing the situation, the real test of patriotic citizenship will be whether or not the town can afford much longer to go on in this loose way of evading the requirements of the law so far as having a genuine public high school is concerned, and getting around the provisions of Benjamin Pynchard's will in trying to save the income from money which he left, to the advantage of a lesser tax rate.

Editorial Cinders

Why, Guy Ham! What in the world are you thinking of? Of all the impertinent men, to question the right of the Republican State Committee to pick a chairman for the forthcoming state convention! This is really the most high-handed suggestion we have noted for some time, your declaring that a young man would best fit the peculiar condition of things at the present time. What can you be thinking of to attempt to overthrow all of the bulwarks of Republicanism as they exist in Massachusetts? You shall be slaughtered and retired into private life forever and ever, unless you at once renounce any claim to any consideration that is not properly vouchered for and O. K. by the powers that be. Beware, Honorable Councillor. The wrath of the gods who hold forth in the Kimball Building is already directed your way. The only way in which you can dodge it is to wire to Washington for immediate reservations in the Gardner lodge of the United Order of Restricted Immigrants.

A town where one can raise nectarines, apricots, luscious tomatoes, eggplants, and all the other delicacies that go so far towards making life worth living, which in addition has a tax rate of $15 on a thousand is a pretty good place in which to live, in these days of the high cost of living. Andover furnishes all of these joys, although not all of the farmers are skilled enough to produce some of the above-mentioned delicacies. Some delicious examples of one of the rarest of these features in the shape of samples of nectarines from the garden of Judge Cann indicate that he is getting his full share of the joys from the success which he is having along these lines.

The Flower Show is on tonight, and while there is a strong impression abroad that things have not been doing quite as well this year as they did last, according to all indications the show that opens today in the Town Hall is to be an excellent and attractive one. Those who have it in charge love the flowers, and have the taste, talent, and time to make this what it always has been, one of the best possible finishes for the summer pleasures which come to those who live in beautiful Andover.

G. A. R. Reunion

Several local G. A. R. veterans are planning to attend the Essex County reunion of Grand Army posts which will take place Saturday, September 6, at Nahant, and notices to the effect that a large delegation from Andover is desired have been sent out by Commander Chandler.

If favorable weather prevails, it is expected by the committee of arrangements that in the vicinity of 1000 members will be present. Contrary to the usual custom there will be no parade this year, a feature which has proved somewhat irksome to the older men.

There are twenty-five Grand Army Posts in Essex County, with an aggregate membership of 1800. Gen. Lander Post, with an enrollment of 458, has the largest membership, and the post at West Newbury has the most limited number, an even dozen of soldiers and sailors.

Nineteen posts have less than 100 members each. The officers of the Essex County Grand Army Association are: Thomas Swasey, Marblehead, president; William F. Wiley, Peabody, vice-president; James A. Wright, Beverly, secretary; William H. Brown, Marblehead, treasurer.

Leave of Absence for Mr. Walker

Owing to his continued illness, Rev. Dean A. Walker, pastor of the West church, who has been spending the summer with Mrs. Walker at Siasconset, Nantucket, will not be able to resume his duties this fall as he had hoped to do. By the advice of his physicians, he has been obliged to accept the offer of the church committee for a longer leave of absence, which will probably extend to a full year.

During his absence, the church work will be carried on by Rev. Newman Matthews, recently of Jacksonville, Fla., who has occupied the pulpit during the summer.

FLOWER SHOW TODAY

Annual Exhibit Opens at 5 o'clock. Continues Tomorrow Afternoon and Evening in Town Hall

Andover's annual flower show opens in the town hall this afternoon at five o'clock, and will continue tomorrow afternoon and evening until ten o'clock. In preparation for the event, the hall has been during the day a scene of considerable bustle and confusion, but in the midst of all the confusion it was plainly evident that the show is to be an excellent one, and all conditions being taken into consideration, fully equal to that of last year.

Over 250 entries had been received by the committee up to Tuesday evening when the list was closed. Of these entries a very generous number were for vegetables and fruit, and this branch of the show promises to be unusually successful. The increase of interest in this department is due to the fact that when making up the schedule of awards the committee in charge offered prizes for each separate class of vegetables rather than for a complete collection, and this gave opportunity for many more to enter into competition than could otherwise have done so. The vegetables and fruit will, as was the case last year, be arranged in the lower town hall, leaving the upper hall free for the flower exhibit.

In spite of rather discouraging indications earlier in the season, this latter branch of the show is decidedly worth the work and time expended in its preparation by the committee. The usual beautiful display of flowers, fruit and vegetables donated by the members of the Gardeners' Association occupies the stage and forms one of the most attractive features of the show.

Another specially interesting display is the big dahlias exhibit arranged for by Fottler, Fiske & Rawson, seedsmen, of Boston, who very kindly consented to show some of their beautiful blooms. Covering as it does about fifty feet of floor space, this addition to the show is a very welcome one, and is sure to be appreciated by all who attend.

The children's portion of the exhibit is one which cannot fail to please, indicating as it does the increasing interest taken by the children in this annual event. Gardens have been carefully tended for many weeks, and so many entries (24 in number) were received for the Townsend prizes, that the task of the committee last Saturday in visiting the various gardens with a view to awarding the prizes was by no means an easy one. The committee consisted of J. H. Playdon, H. F. Chase, and Alexander Brown, and their award will be made known later. Their inspection covered competition for the Townsend prizes, the Smith & Dove prizes, and awards for the best planting plan, and use of available ground space.

Practically all of the children who competed for the above prizes will also enter the best of their flowers and vegetables in the show this afternoon, and the sum of six dollars will be placed in the hands of the judges to be used at their discretion in this department of the exhibit.

The other individual entries consisting of asters, phlox, sweet peas, nasturtiums, zinnias, gladioli, salpiglossis, petunias, and all the numerous other varieties of garden flowers, all carefully set forth under the capable direction of the committee, combine to make a most beautiful showing, and one of which the town may well be proud.

The committee of award for the show will consist of Mr. Berndston of the firm of Swan & Berndston, Lawrence; Frank Leith of Haverhill, and Mr. Coles of Chestnut Hill.

The committee have thus far received hearty support from those interested in the project of making Andover still more beautiful by awakening a more general interest in garden cultivation, and these helps are greatly appreciated. It is hoped, however, that the townspeople as a whole may also lend their aid by attending the show and helping to make the attendance a record one.

The hall will be open today from 5 p.m. to 10 p.m., and tomorrow from 2 to 10 p.m. The admission fee is ten cents.

Communication

To the Editor of the Townsman:—The law saying that boys and girls from fourteen to sixteen years of age cannot work for fifty-four hours a week in our factories is simply absurd and is in keeping with the sentimental nonsense beginning to be taught, that all manual labor is degrading.

We are not all millionaires, and boys and girls of fourteen are all the better for the discipline and regular learning in our factories; and if they have a desire to have more book-learning there are evening schools where they can, at a nominal price, attend. Their work in the factories does not hinder them in any way from getting all the education they desire.

The absurdity of thinking that young people earning the rent to help their fathers and mothers, is wrong, is to me, to put it mildly, sentimental nonsense.

Labor Day in Andover

Labor Day passed uneventfully in Andover so far as any general observance of the day was concerned. Warm but not too oppressive weather made the day enjoyable, and to those who spent it as a home holiday it was pleasant indeed.

As is the case yearly, many people took advantage of the two days respite from work to round out their vacations and summer enjoyments by taking trips to the various beaches and resorts. Trolley traffic was extremely heavy, especially at night, when, as if the door of vacation time was surely swinging to, everyone was hurrying to reach his or her home.

The baseball game played here in the morning between the Elks and Athletics attracted many, while observances in Lawrence, including a match between Lawrence and Lowell, the celebration of the Lawrence Central Labor Union, the reopening of the theatres, and other features, were enjoyed by still other local people. The moving picture show also furnished amusement in the evening when large audiences saw the special holiday attractions arranged by the Colonial management. One happening of the day of special interest was the quiet observance of the sixtieth anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Jenkins, an account of which will be found in another column.

J. W. Berry Estate $30,533

The inventory of the estate of the late J. Warren Berry of this town was filed at Salem this week, the amount being $30,533.

OPENING OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Fall Work Will Begin Next Monday.
Phillips and Abbot to Open the 18th

Andover seems to be coming into her own again, as it were, after a long summer of comparative quiet and calm, for on every side preparations are going forward for the re-opening of the schools, both private and public, in the town. Throughout the business section there is more activity than has marked the past two months, and everything seems to have brought to a close its vacation and to be getting in readiness for the winter's work.

Phillips and Abbot Academies will reopen on September 18, and for several days past old and prospective students, especially of the former school, have been in town, making ready for the fall term. Indications are that both institutions will have still more prosperous years than last.

The public schools will commence work again next Monday, with but few changes from the policies pursued last year. The school committee met on Tuesday evening and discussed numerous plans for the coming year, among which were several changes in the curriculum of the Panchard School. After much debate, the changes were adopted by the school committee and now await approval by the trustees of the school before going into operation.

Several changes will be made in text-books to be used in the various schools. They are as follows:

Frye's "Leading Facts in Geography" will be used in the North, Bailey and Osgood schools.

"Shelter and Clothing" by Kinne and Cooley, a text-book in domestic science, will be used in the high school.

"Community and Citizen" by Dunn, will be employed in the new social science course at Panchard.

The First Aldine Language Book will be introduced into Grades III and IV.

It was also decided to employ Mr. Lunt, the supervisor in manual training, for two days per week instead of one as formerly.

Flower Show Contributions

Additional contributions for the Flower Show have been received as follows:

A friend	5.00
Mary Byers Smith	5.00
Mrs. Peter D. Smith	2.00

A Pleasant Birthday Observance

Last Saturday evening a very pleasant surprise party was given to Edwin W. Pierce, on the occasion of his seventy-fifth birthday. Neighborhood friends gathered with congratulations, in the form of hearty words, bouquets of beautiful asters and other garden flowers, gifts, and the rhymes gives below. Selections on the Victrola, conversation, and guessing of charades were a pleasing entertainment. Near the close of the evening the company drank the health of the host in wine of his own making, and partook of bountiful refreshments. The table was a bower of autumn flowers, and the two big cakes were circled with wreaths, an old-time custom. The merry party broke up, after a delightful evening.

In eighteen hundred and fifty-one The American railway was begun, They say.

In August, eighteen thirty-eight, On such a grand, important date, There happened something mighty great, They say.

A little babe first entrance made Into this land of work and trade, He learned his way from grade to grade And manhood reached, all unafraid, They say.

A good and useful life he shows, With plenty joys, and sometimes woes Filled full of work, the kind that goes, That off is poetry, oft'ner prose, They say.

His heart is big, there's room for all, As friends have reason to recall, They say.

His love for music none can doubt, He always has Victrola out, And other music all about, They say.

His taste for jokes is fast and sure, He loves to hear the roosters roar! His auto often proves a lure, He rides the world, from shore to shore, They say.

And now, on this important date, We've all come here to celebrate The birthday of this man so great, Good wishes have we, by the grate, Piled up so high, a heavy weight, We say.

May health and hope and pleasant things, And riches, (may they ne'er have wings!) And all that helps, but never stings, Be yours this day, We all do say.

OBSERVED 60TH ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Jenkins Quietly
Pass Anniversary of Their Wedding Day

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Jenkins, life-long and highly respected residents of Andover, very quietly observed the sixtieth anniversary of their marriage at the family homestead, which has sheltered four generations of the Jenkins family, on Monday, September 1. Owing to Mr. Jenkins' very feeble health, no special recognition of the day was possible, but the many friends of the aged couple remembered the anniversary with good wishes and flowers, so that the day passed pleasantly.

It is given to but few husbands and wives to pass sixty years together, and reach the point where they can look back over more than half a century of married life, but Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins have that privilege, and now, surrounded by their children and grandchildren, are rounding out lives which have been useful and helpful in the community during the many years of their association with it.

Mr. Jenkins was born on October 7, 1829, in the house where he still lives, which was the home of his father before him, and which was built in 1807. Here it was that he brought his wife on September 1, 1853; there their children were born, and their son Alvin and his children still make their home.

Mrs. Jenkins, whose maiden name was Ellen Holt, lived on Prospect Hill and was born on April 14, 1834. Seven children were the result of the union, three of whom have passed away. The surviving ones are Alvin, Charles, Frank, and Bessie. The couple have nine grandchildren and one great-grandchild, Eleanor, daughter of John Alvin and Alice (Holt) Jenkins.

Mr. Jenkins is a veteran of the Civil War and a member of the local G. A. R. Post.

Public Works Notes

The highway department is doing work in many different parts of the town, among them being Elm street in the vicinity of Selectman Eames's house, where a macadam road is being laid.

Considerable repair work on catch-basins and culverts has been made necessary by the recent rains.

Some much-needed work is going on on the River road, where boulders are being removed from the road-bed and culverts put in good condition.

The work of rebuilding Cuba street has been completed.

Schooling Certificates

In accordance with the new law which went into effect on September first, all schooling certificates which have been issued from the office of the Superintendent of Schools become of no effect, and all minors under twenty-one years of age who are employed in manufacturing and mercantile establishments will be obliged to procure new ones.

Mr. Bemis, superintendent of the Andover schools, has been advised, however, by Robert N. Turner, Acting Deputy Commissioner of Labor, that owing to the impossibility of securing from the state printers the blank forms which are to be used, the issuing of certificates will be impossible at present. Mr. Turner's letter regarding this matter is as follows:

Boston, Sept. 2, 1913

Dear Sir:—

We are informed by the State printers that it is physically impossible to deliver the cards called for by the new school attendance law (chapter 779 of the Acts of 1913) before Wednesday, September 10th. This law takes effect September 1st, and school authorities and employers of labor from all parts of the State are making inquiries as to what must be done to comply with it. We would advise that, until the consignment of new forms is delivered to you, conditions be permitted to continue as at present, and that in the meantime you take such steps as may be necessary to inform the employers of labor in your town or district that the shipment of this material has been unavoidably delayed, and that you will, at the earliest possible moment, deliver to them the cards which they must fill out as a basis for the issuing of certificates to the various minors in their employ.

It would be a great favor to us if you will also assure them for this office that no prosecution, based on the absence of these cards, will be undertaken until they have received the same and had a reasonable amount of time in which to fill them out properly.

Very truly yours,

ROBERT N. TURNER
Acting Deputy Commissioner of Labor

SYLVIA M. ZALLA

Sylvia M. Zalla, daughter of Chas. Zalla, passed away at the family home, 36 Elm court, on Sunday morning, August 31, aged nineteen years. She had been in poor health for some time. The deceased was born in Shenandoah, Pa., but had lived in Andover for several years. She is survived by her father, her mother having died but a short time ago; also by four sisters, Rose, Millie, and Anne of Andover and Sister Rita Aloysius of Trinity College, Washington, D. C. and two brothers, Leo and Eugene.

The funeral took place on Tuesday morning from St. Augustine's church and burial was in St. Augustine's cemetery. The pall bearers were Frank Ronan, Frederick Riordan, Frank Keefe, Michael McGrath, Jas. Kyle and Hugh Eldred.

Burial was in St. Augustine's cemetery, where committal services were conducted by Rev. Wm. Donovan.

THOMAS HODGE

The many Andover friends of Thomas Hodge were sorry to learn of his death which occurred at the home of his parents, 15 Harding street, on Saturday morning, August 30. He had been ill for over two years with tubercular trouble.

Mr. Hodge was twenty-seven years of age and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hodge. He had lived in Andover for about six years. Besides his parents he is survived by two sisters and three brothers.

The funeral services were held on Monday afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. F. A. Wilson officiating. Burial was in the Spring Grove cemetery.

MRS. CORNELIA P. DONALD
Mrs. Cornelia P. Donald, wife of William A. Donald, a retired wool merchant, and well known in Andover, died at Chestnut Hill, September 2, at the age of sixty-four years.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Donald had been ill for some time and in July they were removed from the family residence on Marlboro street to Chestnut Hill in the hope that the change might benefit them. Mr. Donald himself is still a very ill man.

Mrs. Donald before her marriage was Cornelia Perry Howes, daughter of the late Osborne Howes, a ship merchant, and she was born in Boston. Her mother was Abba Crowell, and both the father and mother came of Cape Cod families. Her early education was obtained at private schools, notably the Friends' School in Providence, and later at one in New York City. She was married to Mr. Donald in 1871, and during her life she kept up an active interest in many of the leading philanthropies. She long was a director in the District Nursing Association, and her interest also extended to St. Monica's Home for Colored Women, the Calhoun Club and the Coburn Home for Aged People at Ipswich, of which she also was a director.

Besides her husband Mrs. Donald is survived by three children, Mrs. Frank W. Hallowell of Chestnut Hill, whose husband is a member of the wool firm of Hallowell, Jones & Donald; Gordon, who succeeded his father as an active member; and Malcolm Donald of Mattapan, a lawyer in Boston.

Deaths

In Andover, Saturday, August 30, 1913, aged 27 years, Thomas Hodge.

McDOUGALL'S MUSINGS

A Round About Paper

This week there was a short editorial in the Boston Herald on "German Depression," which I quote in full.

"Our consul general at Frankfurt transmits to the state department the Frankfurter Zeitung's tabulation of the investment in new German enterprises, and the increase of capital in old ones, by quarters for the last five years. From this it appears that in the first quarter of 1913 only $52,000,000 was thus invested as against almost twice that sum in the corresponding quarter of the year before. The average for the four preceding years was fifty per cent larger than the amount for this year. The second quarter, ending June 30th, told a nearly similar story. This year's new capitalization proved the smallest of any corresponding quarter since 1909.

"To political complications, an unfavorable money market, and uncertain business conditions, the Zeitung assigns these evidences of arrested industrial development. Doubtless back of all this lies the excessive taxation under which the Fatherland is now suffering."

My reason for referring to this consul general's report is to let our high tariff men see that high tariffs, or, as Mr. Roosevelt calls it, the scientific German tariff, does not always make a country rich; neither does a high tariff always bring high wages to working people. Russia has perhaps the highest tariffs of any country and her rate of wages is about one-half that of free trade England. Tariffs are to make goods dearer, that's all, and the buyers or consumers have just got to pay the tariff.

This does not mean that in the American textile trades the present rate of wages could be paid with cheaper imported goods. There is no use in the blinking and slipping over this wage question on the part of our low tariff friends. The question is, will seventy or eighty millions of people pay a high price for goods so as to give the other ten million people who are engaged in the textile trades the high wages now current. To me this is the kernel of the whole matter as to tariffs. To anyone who knows about the way in which Germany looks after the poor, the aged and helpless.

Musical Festival at Canobie Lake

Following closely upon the grand success of last year, four great concerts with leading soloists and a chorus of 300, are to be given at Canobie Lake Park on Saturday and Sunday, September 6 and 7, afternoon and evening. Choral societies of the valley have been merged into one large, well-harmonized body, with E. G. Hood of Nashua as conductor, and some of the most prominent singers the country affords have been engaged.

Mrs. Grace Bonner Williams, the soprano at the Arlington Street church in Boston, and the recipient of many flattering offers from other places, will be heard again, while Paul Althouse, the youngest singer in grand opera, a member of the Metropolitan Company, will have leading numbers on the varied program. Miss Mildred Potter, one of New York's greatest mezzo-sopranos, Reinold Werrenrath, a baritone of wonderful range, and Willard Flint, a stellar basso from New York, are among the others who are certain to charm. There is an array of soloists, who together make one of the finest selections of singers that it is possible to procure.

The Boston Festival Orchestra of fifteen men are also to be here again this year and as their parts in the program are important, the very fact that they will come augurs well for a successful engagement. The choral societies of Manchester, Nashua, Lowell and Lawrence are combined and are rehearsing for the final performances with a vim and enthusiasm in their work that gives evidence of some splendid chorus numbers.

A miscellaneous concert is to be the offering for Saturday afternoon. Miss Potter and Mr. Werrenrath will be the soloists, and Carl Webster the cellist. The Boston Festival Orchestra will appear at every performance with the full quota of fifteen men.

In the evening of Saturday, the this additional strain of having thousands of able-bodied unemployed people to care for is by no means easy. A dangerous, nasty kind of socialism is prevalent, and it will take all the wisdom and cunning of the Kaiser and his advisers to steer the ship of state into quieter waters. The good sense and sound general education of the German nation will keep her from anarchy and civil war.

As I see it, the stupidity of having such a large standing army and the spending of money on ships of war, account for the consul general's report from Frankfurt.

It is really amusing to read what some of our senators in Washington are saying about putting wheat on the free list. One learned gentleman says that the effect of England's putting wheat on the free list has been to diminish the growing of wheat to such an extent that in twenty years England will be starving and bankrupt! Not being a prophet I cannot say what may happen in twenty years. I know that land in Britain is double the value it was before wheat was placed on the free list and that workmen's wages are fully as much again as they were seventy years ago. I know also that the commerce of the country has increased by leaps and bounds since Sir Robert Peel shed tears when he left the old Tory party and took the tax off the people's bread. The exports and imports of Britain are more than those of any other country, and the reports of a trade journal, an English paper not friendly to the Asquith ministry, of last week's date, says that there never was a time when business generally was so brisk—even after the several strikes that cost the country millions of dollars.

I am not foolish enough to say that free trade has done all this; I only state what progress the country has made during my lifetime.

I expected to have written another farming letter this week, but will do so next week if I can. All I say just now is that the wheat farmers in the West are no fools. They read of five hundred thousand bushels of wheat being shipped from Boston one week and, like sensible men, cannot see that twenty-five cents or twenty-five dollars duty on wheat can alter the export price.

The Neighborhood Railroad

The railroad system of New England is aptly called "the neighborhood railroad".

BECAUSE:—

65,000 of your neighbors own it's stock.

80,000 of your neighbors are employed.

This means that 38,000,000 dollars are distributed by this one industry to your neighbors.

Your neighbors spend this enormous sum in New England.

Think what this means for YOUR business!

Cat-tails

From a poem cut from Harper's Bazar years ago about a Cat-tail, I quote:
"Down in a swamp where the alders bloom
A weary Cat-tail hung its head.
My heart is wrapped around with gloom;

I would, I would that I were dead!
Life here is never hilarious,
And always somewhat 'malarious,' said this discontented cat-tail.

The poem goes on to tell of the bracing up of the plant to do its best and attain great size, if it could not be a "moss rose to be pressed to the nose of a fair maid." And it grew and grew to a great size, "bigger and bigger and browner" till a "maiden fair with eyes of blue, came driving along." She had studied artistic decoration. She cut it short; she made it a bow with loops and ends, and hung it against the wall; the humble cat-tail, much elated, hanging beside Kensington work, panels of stork's, peacock's feathers and Japanese fans. This aesthetic cat-tail reminded me, as I glanced the poem over in pasting it on Labor Day, of the cutting I kept from the Indianapolis News, passed along by the Portland Argus, about our cat-tail of commerce, used in making the flag-bottomed seats of chairs for generations.

It seems in the shortage of paper material they are utilizing the flags of the great Montezuma marshes, north of Cayuga Lake in New York, covering 40,000 acres. This region also raises mosquitoes, muskrats, and wild ducks. This month of August they have risen to ten feet and the harvest is beginning. The last year, I think it was, the Cayuga canal under construction drained part of the swamp, so only a section requires boats, and in the spongy places the men seek mounds of harder ground, wading after the flags with long sickles, taking great care not to work alone, in case of being mired in the ooze. The cutting is below the water line, and is carried to the marsh bank for drying, and the plant, green at top, white below, presents an odd appearance in the long stripped rows. They are stored in warehouses and several cuttings are made in the season, which lasts till the marsh freezes, employing hundreds of men. Fire sometimes gets in, possibly from pipes of workmen, and can be seen for thirty miles. Baskets and chair bottoms also contest with the cooper casks. A strip of the flag laid between the staves makes a tighter joint. Now the paper makers find it will make the best quality of paper, strong, flexible, resisting tension without tearing, impervious to moisture. It will take most dyes and can be used where jute, hemp, and wood pulp have been scarce and costly. Most is shipped all over the United States. A Syracuse company using over 4000 tons annually for saleratus boxes and millions of reams of paper to line soda barrels, now use this flag. Paper mills have been built on the marshes and the army of harvesters using scientific methods and air trolleys speed the new industry. I was wondering if we have in Wilmington swamp and places adjacent the opportunity for a new industry here on the "Land of Nod" line, our ancestors quarreled over. The rapid growth of the cat-tail on the shallow borders of Foster's pond suggests that areas now isolated could be connected by canals and some one could invest in what seems to be a paying industry in the paper supply. There could be a paper factory; possibly the South Middleton plant is not too far, considering the old Salem and Lowell road between the swamp and the mill.

I miss the smiling children on the way to West Peabody to school who climbed the morning train during these late years of my Salem trips, with the loving mother faces watching them off. Why can't Middleton and Wilmington unite forces and promote a new industry. What is the advantage in leaving the swamp to breed moths?

Campfire gum burned over a flame either of candle or lamp, or in a small metal cup over an alcohol lamp turned low, drives away mosquitoes. A water solution that takes less campfire than alcohol and is a very safe and valuable remedy recommended by the late Dr. Walter Kimball to take by the tablespoonful in colds, could be tried as a face wash when exposed to the attacks of these little pests.

AT THE THEATRES

BOSTON

The preparations for the presentation at the Boston theatre for a limited engagement of two weeks, beginning Monday, September 15, of the first New England rural comic opera ever produced, "The Courtin'", are proceeding with great elaboration of detail. As is well known by this time, "The Courtin'" is really a musical adaptation of the famous New England country play, "Quincy Adams Sawyer" which has already had several long and successful engagements at this theatre, and this play was a dramatization of what has been generally accepted as the best New England story ever written.

Charles Felton Pidgin, who wrote the novel, and Justin Adams, who made the dramatization of it, combined in writing the libretto and lyrics of this rural comic opera, and George Lowell Tracy, the well-known Boston composer, wrote the music especially for this production. With such an admirable association of opera-smiths the public may rest assured that all the rural charm of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" and of the late Mr. Lowell's poem of New England love matches as conducted in the early sixties "on the farm" have been preserved.

The production is promised as an elaborate one, and the costumes elaborately and charmingly preserve the quaint sartorial picturesqueness of the period. It is promised that the music possesses all the simple and popular charm which characterized the score of "Pinafore." The cast has been carefully selected and includes, among the principals: Grace Freeman as Huldry, Walter Paschal as J. Quincy Adams, Robert Milliken as Hezekiah Hawkins, Paul Irving as Reuben Green, Arthur Ridgewell as Zekle, and Helen Merton as Tillie Titcomb.

PLYMOUTH

At the Plymouth theatre, Miss May Irwin, on next Monday, will begin the second week of her engagement in "Widow by Proxy," the funniest piece this popular comedienne has had in years. The play in which she is appearing is brand new, full of bright, breezy and snappy dialogues, and never lags for a single moment. Of course Miss Irwin, to use the slang phraseology, is the "whole show." As Gloria Grey, a singing teacher, she easily upholds her reputation of the "greatest laugh producer in the country." Finding herself and her bosom friend, a supposed widow, in need of money, Gloria decides to impersonate the widow in order to obtain a legacy left by a rich uncle of her dead husband. To get the money she must visit the home of her husband's people. From the minute she makes her appearance at the Pennington home, Gloria is the cause of a series of complicating and amusing incidents, that provoke the greatest laughs Boston has had in years. And of course all ends well when the true motive of the deceit is discovered. You can send in your order for seats by making checks payable to Fred E. Wright, with the assurance that it will be given the strictest attention. The usual Thursday and Saturday matinees are held. Miss Irwin's engagement is for four weeks only.

TREMONT TEMPLE

That the motion picture drama has cut a big figure in the theatrical world is evidenced by the astonishing success achieved by "Les Miserables," Victor Hugo's wonderful story, presented in motion photography at the Tremont Temple. The story is presented in four acts comprising nine reels that form the nucleus of a series of tense and exciting scenes, the like of which have never before been witnessed. The pictures are unusually remarkable for their clarity and vividness. One of the spectacular elements is the barricade scene during the rebellion of 1832, when the working classes poured into the streets of Paris barricading themselves against the troops. All of the characters of the story are sharply outlined and impersonated by representative actors and actresses from the leading theatres of Paris. To those who have read the book the production will prove doubly interesting for the reason that most of the interest contained in the book is admirably sustained in the pictures. On next Monday will start the second week of the engagement, which is scheduled to remain for a limited time only. There will be daily matinees and a popular scale of prices, 25c, 35c, and 50c will prevail.

Geo. Parker Ryley was in town a few days ago after an absence of nearly forty years, renewing acquaintance with old friends and early associations. He was the son of the late Geo. H. Ryley, a well-known wool merchant of Boston, and for many years a resident of Ballardvale. He purchased the beautiful estate of the late John Marland, comprising one hundred acres of village land. His sudden death by accident removed from the business world of which he was a factor, a world of which he was a useful and man of great promise and usefulness and he was sincerely mourned. After a few years of widowhood, Mrs. Elizabeth Ryley sold the estate, which has been divided into several parts. The Ballardvale Mills own the mansion and surrounding buildings and about twenty acres of land. A farm house and buildings have become separate property. The town purchased the baseball grounds, and numerous house lots were sold.

Reunion of the 19th Regiment

The forty-third reunion of the 19th Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, was held August 28 in Fall River. Nearly fifty of the surviving members of the regiment from New England cities and towns met, elected officers and exchanged war reminiscences.

Seven Andover soldiers enlisted in Company A of this regiment. Two of them, William E. Barrows of Andover and Thomas F. Winthrop of Ballardvale, attained the rank of captain before their discharge at the close of their three years' service. Veteran Archibald Higgins of Lowell, one of the privates from this village and a charter member of Wm. F. Bartlett Post, G. A. R., of Andover, who is never absent from a Memorial Day parade, was elected one of the vice-presidents of the regiment on that occasion. He was a brother of the late Mrs. Charles Green, an active and much loved member of the W. R. C. of this town. The 19th Massachusetts was one of the bravest regiments in the Union service. It was engaged in many of the fiercest, bloodiest battles. In less than a year after it left Massachusetts the regiment had lost in killed and wounded more than one-half its officers and men. "Of the thirty-seven commissioned officers who left Massachusetts with the regiment in 1861, only one returned. Col. Edward Rice, who went out as captain, came home colonel commanding the regiment."

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Michelsen returned home this week after spending the summer in New Bedford.

A reader of the Townsman sends in to the office the following suggestion. "There is a man running an automobile from Methuen to the Wood Mill all day taking passengers for five cents. I wish there was one running from Andover to the Wood Mill by way of Union street instead of going through Lawrence by electric."

A New Andover Book

Two years ago the librarian of Memorial Hall surprised us with a children's book, "Four Gordons," which proved a most excellent juvenile, and one of the "best sellers" of the season. The Lothrop, Lee & Shepherd Company has just issued another book by the same author, entitled "Uncle David's Boys." There are girls as well as boys in the story, the scene of which is laid in upper Vermont, close to the Canada line, where the children—from Massachusetts or Rhode Island?—spent their summer vacation. One can almost locate the Greenfield and Centerville, although those exact names do not appear on the map in Orleans County, in the vicinity of Lake Memphramagog! One can be certain that Miss Brown must have known "Uncle David," sometime, somewhere, so natural does he seem as an intelligent, strong-minded, good-hearted New England farmer.

It is really and truly a children's book, with occurrences and descriptions that they can understand, the narration of which is wholesome and helpful, and the whole written in good English, without a word of silly slang. It is not a sensational novel, yet full of lifelike interest for real, hearty, sportive boys and girls. There is indeed a romantic thread of strange incidents running through the story, as to a secret chamber in a deserted old mansion, hidden staircases, and possible spectres at night, but all explained at last in a most natural manner, as such things usually can be. There is beside a bit of a revolutionary tradition made out of a neglected gravestone on an abandoned farm—I feel sure that epitaph is a genuine copy!

Best of all, one of the heroes of the tale in a Phillips Andover boy. There's no mistake about that, for the last leaf of the book is a facsimile of "Billy's Entrance Certificate," with his class assignment, the class officers, from Prof. Forbes to Mr. Keep, the date of the certificate in September, 1912, and the note, "Must pass off spelling," all signed by Cecil K. Bancroft, Registrar!

Perhaps the Trustees will have an extra copy or two of "Uncle David's Boys" put into the library, so that all the Andover boys and girls can have a chance at it, in addition to the older folks who might go to the bookstore to get it for a birthday or a holiday present!
